Bachelor's thesis Sunday's and Weekday's Liturgical Life in Current Urban Parishes contains two parts– the theoretical one and the practical one.

The theoretical part focuses on the basic differences between liturgical life on Sunday and on weekdays and during the liturgical year. It begins with a description how the religious life of the Jews looked like. It outlines the history of the celebration of the liturgy in the West and in the East by pointing out the differences which still remain. In the historical description it can't omit the influence of the Vatican Council II. and its Constitution Sacrosanctum Concilium on the liturgical celebration. Then it clarifies differences between liturgy and popular piety. In the crux of this thesis is an analysis of liturgical life during the whole week. In chosen parishes it examines liturgical life and it takes note of the differences.
